INTRODUCTION

The Florida State Museum was established in 1917 by an act of the state legislature as a department of the University of Florida, Gainesville. For 29 years, until his retirement in 1946, Dr. T. H. van Hyning oversaw its slow but steady growth. The Museum remained dormant from 1946 till 1951, at which time it was reactivated with Dr. Arnold B. Grobman as director. He was succeeded by Dr. J. C. Dickinson, Jr., who became acting director in 1959 and director in 1961, a position he presently occupies. With the decision to reactivate the Museum in 1951, certain collections previously maintained by the Department of Biology and the Department of Geology were merged with holdings of the Museum.

The administrative offices and exhibits section of the Museum were moved from campus to the Seagle Building, in downtown Gainesville, in 1937. The various natural history collections, however, remained on campus for many years, with most (all except fishes and invertebrate fossils) finally being moved to the Seagle Building during the early and mid-1960's, and one (Arthropods) being transferred in 1959 to the State Plant Board of Florida (now the Division of Plant Industry) to be incorporated into its large collection. In all cases quarters were extremely crowded and generally inadequate. Despite these shortcomings the Museum continued to grow, with the permanent curatorial staff in Natural Sciences increasing from an initial size of one-half position (half-time in the Department of Biology) in 1951 to four in 1961. During this time most of the collections continued to be active, with the curatorial responsibilities in some cases being handled by various staff members in the Biology and Geology departments. By the late 1960's the permanent curatorial staff had risen to seven, and the number of full-time technicians increased from two to five. In September 1970 the Museum moved into its present quarters, a 2.5 million dollar tri-level complex built in the form of an ancient Mayan pyramid. This building was financed by a 1.1 million dollar grant from the National Science Foundation, with the remainder coming from the state of Florida and private sources. This was accompanied by further growth of both the professional and subprofessional staffs. At the present time there are 11 curators, two associates, and five full-time technicians working in the various Natural Sciences collections.

The disciplines for which collections are maintained in the Museum's Natural Sciences Department are herpetology, ichthyology, ornithology, mammalogy, malacology, zooarcheology, invertebrate paleontology, and vertebrate paleontology; with the geographical areas best represented being southeastern United States, Central America, and the West Indies. Many new taxa have been described based entirely or in part on material from these collections. In addition to the types emanating directly from work on museum material, a number have been acquired by exchange with other institutions or as the result of transferral of collections from other museums. In accordance with Recommendation 72D (Institutional Responsibility) of the International Code of Zoological Nomenclature (1961), the following list of type material in the Florida State Museum has been prepared. As can be seen, the bulk is from the ichthyology, herpetology, malacology, and vertebrate paleontology collections. No types are present in the ornithology and zooarcheology collections.

Insofar as possible a standard format has been followed in preparing these lists, with emphasis being placed on brevity of presentation. Taxa are separated by classes, but are listed alphabetically within the class according to the species or subspecies name; the family name is included in each case. Situations in which the taxon has subsequently been 1) synonymized with another form, 2) elevated to a species or reduced to a subspecies, 3) placed in a different genus, or 4) modified with regard to spelling of the species name (gender of patronyms) are so indicated in the lists. The source of original description is listed for each taxon, rather than in a list at the end of the section, and only the pages and figures actually dealing with the description of the new form are included. No locality or collection data are included for either the primary (name-bearing) or secondary (non name-bearing) types; however, for vertebrate and invertebrate fossils the geological age is indicated, either by period (for Paleozoic and Mesozoic material) or epoch (for Cenozoic material). The Florida State Museum catalogue number is given in all cases (each collection has its own set of numbers), and the number of paratypic specimens is indicated in parentheses. The Florida State Museum/University of Florida abbreviations (FSM or UF), which are normally used in publication, are omitted throughout. Paratypes are included for most collections, but not for some (malacology and vertebrate paleontology), this being at the discretion of the individual curators. All malacological types listed belong to the class Gastropoda.

Whole specimens in the herpetology and ichthyology collections are permanently preserved in 40-45 percent isopropyl alcohol. These collections also include osteological material that is entered in the respective catalogues along with the alcoholic specimens. The ornithology, mammalogy, and malacology collections are comprised mostly of dry material (skins, eggs, bones, and shells), with a smaller number of specimens in the last two collections being preserved in 70 percent isopropyl alcohol.

The types lists for certain collections (fishes, reptiles and amphibians, molluscs, vertebrate paleontology, and invertebrate paleontology) are preceded by short summaries relating to such matters as size, history, and geographic coverage of the collection, or further explanation of certain things appearing in the lists. In addition, supplementary mimeographed lists are being prepared for fishes, reptiles and amphibians, and invertebrate fossils. These will include more detailed information on the types, complete listings of the publications cited, and in some cases additional information on the history, size, and composition of the particular collection involved.

FOSSIL INVERTEBRATES

GRAIG D. SHAAK AND KENNETH E. CAMPBELL, JR.

The collection of fossil invertebrates has enjoyed rapid growth and development. It was begun in 1958 by Dr. H. K. Brooks, Department of Geology, and remained under his care until 1972, when Dr. Shaak was appointed the first full-time curator in Invertebrate Paleontology. Dr. Brooks was assisted by various graduate students and by Mrs. Dora Partheniades, who worked first as a volunteer and later was employed (between 1971 and 1972) on a part-time basis. Dr. Brooks still maintains an active interest in his role as adjunct curator. The collection was housed in the Department of Geology (Floyd Hall), before being moved to the new Museum building in 1970.

The holdings have recently been greatly enhanced by the acquisition, from the Coastal Petroleum Company, of a substantial amount of material, much of it identified. Special thanks are due Mrs. Muriel Hunter, through whose generosity the collection was made available.

A more detailed, mimeographed version of this catalogue is also being prepared, including secondary types. This will be distributed to colleagues or can be obtained by writing the senior author.

FOSSIL VERTEBRATES

S. DAVID WEBB AND THOMAS H. PATTON

The fossil vertebrate types in the Florida State Museum reflect the principal strengths of the collection. Most are from Florida, and the rest are from the West Indies. The collections also emphasize Florida, and in general cover the entire Caribbean region. Chronologically, a majority of these types are of Pleistocene age, with the Pliocene and Miocene epochs also being well represented. This reflects the simple fact that few terrestrial deposits exposed in the Caribbean region predate the middle of the Cenozoic era.

The Florida State Museum has developed collections in paleontology only relatively recently. This fact is reflected in the types, the first of which was not described until 1957. Since then types have been added at an average rate of three per year. Prior to 1957 no paleontology collection existed as such, the principal collections of Florida fossil vertebrates being housed at the United States National Museum, the American Museum of Natural History, Harvard University, and the Florida Geological Survey (in Tallahassee). Since then, however, the Florida State Museum collection has grown so rapidly that it has now become the largest repository of Florida fossil vertebrates.

RECENT MOLLUSCS (CLASS GASTROPODA)

RICHARD FRANZ AND FRED G. THOMPSON

The mollusc collection includes over 40,000 lots of specimens, emphasizing the land and freshwater molluscs of coastal United States and Tropical America. Housed in the collection are 48 holotypes and lectotypes, most of which were recently described by Fred G. Thompson.

The collection has its origin with O. T. van Hyning. When van Hyning joined the staff, he brought with him a substantial collection from Iowa, forming the basis of the present holdings. Additional material was subsequently added by various individuals, including a large portion of the Maxwell Smith collection. Later Robert M. DeWitt, now with the Department of Zoology, University of Florida, added considerable freshwater material from the southeastern United States and the Great Lakes Region. William J. Clench and Ruth D. Turner, through National Park Service and National Science Foundation grants to J. C. Dickinson, Jr. and the Florida State Museum, collected widely in the Appalachicola basin of Georgia, Alabama, and Florida. Part of this material is also housed here. Since 1966 major additions have been made by Fred G. Thompson.

RECENT FISHES.

CARTER R. GILBERT

The following list, comprising 87 taxa, includes 14 holotypes, one neotype, and a total of 1536 paratypes. All are bony fishes (class Osteichthyes), no members of the other two living classes of fishlike vertebrates (Agnatha and Chondrichthyes) as yet being represented by type material. A substantial number (332) of the paratypes formerly were in the collection of the Tropical Atlantic Biological Laboratory (TABL) of the National Marine Fisheries Service (now the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration), Miami, Florida. Much of this collection was transferred to the Florida State Museum during the fall of 1972. The material formerly in the TABL collection is so indicated in the following list.

Eight taxa not included in the following list are expected to be described within the next year. Only paratypes are involved. These include a new species and subspecies of the carcharhinid shark genus Mustelus, to be described by P. C. Heemstra; a new species of the cyprinodontid genus Rivulus (R. R. Miller and C. L. Hubbs); a new species of the gobiid genus Gobionellus (C. R. Gilbert and J. E. Randall); a new species of the centrarchid genus Micropterus (J. S. Ramsey); two new species of the sciaenid genus Sciaena (R. V. Miller and L. N. Chao); and a new species of the percid genus Etheostoma (R. W. Bouchard).

A more detailed, mimeographed version of this type catalogue is also being prepared. This will be distributed to individuals on the author's mailing list, and may be obtained by writing the author.

Abbreviations appearing in the list are as follows: LACM (Los Angeles County Museum), MNHN (Museum National d'Histoire Naturelle) (Paris), TABL (Tropical Atlantic Biological Laboratory), and UMMZ (University of Michigan, Museum of Zoology).

RECENT AMPHIBIANS AND REPTILES

STEVEN P. CHRISTMAN

The collection of recent amphibians and reptiles contains approximately 50,000 specimens, including 406 types. There are 33 holotypes and 373 paratypes, comprising 115 different taxa.

In the following list the amphibians and reptiles are treated separately. Within these respective classes the taxa are treated in strict alphabetical sequence, regardless of family. The following abbreviations are used: ERA-WTN (collections of E. Ross Allen and Wilfred T. Neill), MCZ (Museum of Comparative Zoology, Harvard University), PM (Peabody Museum, Yale University), TCWC (Texas Cooperative Wildlife Collection), and WTN and WTN-US (collections of Wilfred T. Neill).

A more detailed, mimeographed herpetological type catalogue is also being prepared.

Contributions to the BULLETIN OF THE FLORIDA STATE MUSEUM, Biological Sciences may be in any field of biology. Manuscripts dealing with natural history or systematic problems involving the southeastern United States or the New World tropics are solicited especially. Manuscripts should be of medium length — circa 50 to 200 pages (15,000-60,000 words). Examination for suitability is made by an Editorial Board.

The BULLETIN is distributed worldwide through institutional subscriptions and exchanges only. It is considered the responsibility of the author to distribute his paper to all interested individuals. To aid in this the author receives fifty copies free, and he may purchase additional separates at cost if ordered when page proof is returned.

PREPARATION OF MANUSCRIPT

Contributors should consult recent numbers of the BULLETIN for preferred style and format. Highly recommended as a guide is the CBE Style Manual, third edition, 1972 (Washington, D. C., Amer. Inst. Biol. Sci.).

MSS must be submitted in duplicate (please no onionskin) and satisfy the following minimal requirements: They should be typewritten, double-spaced (especially tables, figure captions, and "literature cited"), on one side of numbered sheets of standard (8½ x 11 in.) bond paper, with at least one-inch margins all around. Tables (which should be unruled) and figure legends should be typed on separate sheets. All illustrations are referred to as figures. They must comply with the following standards: Photographs should be sharp, with good contrast, and printed on glossy paper. Drawings should be made with dense black waterproof ink on quality paper or illustration board. All lettering will be medium weight, sans-serif type (e.g. Futura Medium, News Gothic) in cutout, dry transfer, or lettering guide letters. Make allowance so that after reduction no lowercase letter will be less than 1 mm high (2 mm is preferred) nor any capital letter greater than 5 mm high. The maximum size for illustrations is 8½ in. x 14 in. (twice typepage size); illustrations should not be less than typepage width (4 5/16 in.). Designate the top of each illustration and identify on the back with soft pencil by author's name, MS title, and figure number.
